Performance

Quarterly Commentary

The effort to reduce inflation remains on track although it seems that it will slow by year-end. Rising oil prices which are estimated to stabilize at the level of 90 dollars/barrel pose risks to inflation particularly for the Eurozone, which is a net energy importer. Indicators of global growth, including purchasing manager index (PMI) surveys suggest an ongoing slowdown. Services activity is slowing to converge with weak manufacturing, although the latter appears to be stabilizing. The US economy continues to prove resilient to higher interest rates environment, but signs of slowdown have begun to emerge (slower job creation and wage growth in particular) and are expected to intensify in the coming months. In Eurozone, although the fundamentals are robust, the economy appears more vulnerable than the US. The corporate profits, while high, may suffer from rising rates, while excess household savings have been invested in illiquid assets (especially real estate) and are therefore not available to support the recovery in consumption. In addition, risks to inflation remain tilted to the upside, giver higher oil prices and the persistent tensions in the labour market. In Asia, the Chinese economy continues to struggle, given the structural fragility of the local real estate market and the decline in external demand. Conversely, the Japanese economy has surprised positively. In this environment Triton (LF) Global Balanced recorded returns of +9.66% over the nine-month period.

Investment risks

Risks from the Sub-Fund's techniques and securities

ıt	Credit Liquidity		Derivatives (Leverage)	Currency at	The potential loss arising from the uncertainty on an issuer's ability or willingness to repay a loan or meet contractual obligations. This risk is heightened in a market environment, where interest rates are rising, as well as in connection with the Fund's investments in non- investment grade fixed income securities.	The fund operates in a market characterized by low trade volumes and securities that may become illiquid. This results in a higher risk of losses due to reduced trading speed/efficiency and sharper price fluctuations.	(Leverage) The derivatives market introduces significant levels of complexity.increasing the probability of adverse gains or losses to the fund that holds derivatives. The higher sensitivity to price movements of the underlying asset can asymmetrically affect the price of a derivative that is linked to it.	Exchange rate fluctuations may negatively impact the value of investments designated in another currency exchange rates could result in a decrease in return and a loss of capital. It may not be possible to successfully hedge against the currency risk exposure in all circumstances.
