Q3 Commentary

Q3 2026 was marked by renewed US–Iran tensions, with Brent crude rising above $100/bbl and the Bloomberg Commodity Index gaining 16%, reigniting inflation concerns. Despite higher yields and tighter monetary policy, the S&P 500 gained 2.03% in Q3, bringing its year-to-date return to 11.77%, while the Nasdaq Composite rose 2.47% during the quarter. US small caps underperformed, with the Russell 2000 falling 7.52% in Q3, as higher financing costs weighed on rate-sensitive companies. Japanese equities led developed markets, gaining approximately 6–7%, while European equities lagged, with major regional indices declining around 1–2%. Emerging-market equities lost momentum following the July semiconductor sell-off, while AI-related capital expenditure and strong corporate earnings continued to support US technology stocks. Bond markets came under significant pressure, with the US 10-year Treasury yield rising 87 basis points to 5.29% by quarter-end, amid persistent inflation, fiscal deficits and further rate hikes by the Fed, ECB and BoJ. Overall, resilient earnings and AI investment supported global equities, while higher yields, energy-price volatility and geopolitical uncertainty weighed on fixed income and increased cross-asset dispersion. Against this backdrop, the Triton (LF) Flexible Multi-Asset FOF (Class A) recorded a return of +2.84%.

Investment risks

Risks from the Sub-Fund's techniques and securities

Counterparty	Market	Liquidity	Currency
The Sub-Fund could lose money if an entity with which it does business becomes unwilling or unable to honor its commitments to the Sub-Fund.	The fund is subject to normal market fluctuations and the risks associated with investing in securities markets. The value of your investment and the income from it may be affected by general economic and political factors as well as industry or company specific factors.	Certain securities could become hard to value, or to sell at a desired time and price.	Exchange rate fluctuations may negatively impact the value of investments designated in another currency. Adverse movements in currency exchange rates could result in a decrease in return and a loss of capital. It may not be possible to successfully hedge against the currency risk exposure in all circumstances.
